

WRITING ACTIVITY

Reflective Writing:

An account of personal experiences; personal view point; individual perspective

DIRECTIONS: Write and submit to a local newspaper, a 5-paragraph editorial column on the King Tut exhibit and his reign. Discuss what you learned about King Tut - his leadership characteristics, style, and from your perspective, critique how effective he was as a ruler.

Tips on How to Write a Reflective Essay

A reflective essay is essentially your thoughts on a subject - specifically what you have learned.

The reflective essay gives you an opportunity to reflect and discuss your achievements while completing the project./activity Your work on the project/activity is not completed until you evaluate your work objectively in a reflective essay.

Before actually writing collect all the materials that refer to the project/activity you completed. Study these materials and objectively evaluate your learning experiences and final project. Be honest about the weak and strong points of your project/activity and determine how it can be improved.

Start writing the first draft.

Describe your project/activity. How did it contribute to your self development? Evaluate the quality of your work. Did you achieve your goals? Tell how you might have made your project/activity better.

Revise your first draft.

Whatever project/activity you choose for your reflective essay, attention should be paid to the final result. What meaning will your project/activity have for the readers? How does your project/activity teach those who did not work on it? Get your reader interested by writing an introduction that would catch their attention and conclusion that they will remember. You should also keep in mind that your paper will be rated on the quality of your writing as well as the content and whether all the required information was included.

Write in a clear style. Show your essay to someone for helpful feedback.

Written by: http://www.privatewriting.com/reflective_essay.html

